RURAL JUSTICE COLLABORATIVE

Rural communities face unique challenges that impact their ability to deliver fair and equitable justice. Despite these challenges, rural communities rely on their many strengths to address the needs of their residents.

The National Center for State Courts, in partnership with Rulo Strategies, launched the Rural Justice Collaborative (RJC) to showcase the strengths of rural communities and highlight the cross-sector collaboration that is a hallmark of rural justice systems.

The work under the RJC is supported by a crosssector advisory council composed of rural judges along with additional stakeholders in the justice, child welfare, and behavioral health systems. The advisory council guides and identifies innovative programs and practices.

SECOND CHANCE ACT COMMUNITY-BASED REENTRY PROGRAM

Through this program, the Bureau of Justice Assistance is seeking applications for funding under the Second Chance Act to provide grants to nonprofit organizations and Indian tribes to implement or expand reentry programs that demonstrate strong partnerships with corrections, parole, probation, other reentry service providers, and stakeholders. Nine awards will be made to organizations serving rural communities.

Eligibility:
- Native American tribal governments (Federally recognized)
- Nonprofits having a 501(c)(3) status with the IRS, other than institutions of higher education

Award Amount:
Up to $750,000

Improved Opioid Treatment Programs Would Expand Access to Quality Care

Patients with opioid use disorder should have access to the medication that works best for them as soon as they are ready to engage in treatment. For some, this means having a nearby opioid treatment program so that they can receive methadone. Yet, in many states, particularly in their rural areas, these services are out of reach.

Lifesaving Addiction Treatment Out of Reach for Many Americans

Results from a new study by The Pew Charitable Trusts show that geography and health insurance coverage, rather than medical need, often determine whether patients can access effective treatment for opioid use disorder. Pew's 50-state analysis of opioid treatment programs found significant disparities in care from state to state.

How Supported Do Rural Officers Feel? Interpreting the Data from Police’s State of the Industry Survey

Police 1’s second annual State of the Industry survey asked officers how supported they feel by their leadership and community. The results suggest some very real differences between rural and urban police officers, but also some important similarities across geographic setting.

Podcast: Human Trafficking is on the Rise in Rural America

Podcast featuring Dr. Jarrod Sadulski, Faculty Member, Criminal Justice and Dr. Christi Bartman, Eyes Up Appalachia

Human trafficking can look a lot different than what most people expect, especially in rural areas. In this podcast episode, AMU criminal justice professor Dr. Jarrod Sadulski talks to Dr. Christi Bartman about her work in rural Ohio to dispel myths and provide education, awareness, and resources about the reality of human trafficking.
Intimate Partner Violence: A Best Practice Guide for Prosecutors in Smaller Jurisdictions

Authored by Professor Maybell Romero, Prosecuting Attorney Jon Tunheim, and IIP Policy Attorney Chantelle Williams, this new report provides a survey of IPV prosecution in smaller jurisdictions, particularly rural ones, based on research and information provided by the Beyond Big Cities members.

Small & Rural Agency Crisis Response: A National Survey and Case Studies

The National Police Foundation embarked on a study to understand how small and rural agencies respond to calls involving people who are in crisis. Responding to a person who is experiencing a mental or behavioral crisis is challenging to all law enforcement agencies, but especially to small and rural law enforcement agencies where geographic distances are great, populations sparse, and resources limited.

Strategies for Rural Communities for Addressing Substance Misuse among Families Involved with the Child Welfare System

This publication describes nine programs and the ways they have addressed challenges to serving child welfare-involved parents with substance use issues, with a particular focus on rural communities. These programs offered various types of services, including parent mentoring, case management, home visiting, treatment for opioid use disorders, or an array of substance use disorder treatment and family services.
